WILL VOTE ON PLAN TO REPAIR OLD BRIDGE

ports a plan submitted by the Vir-ginia Bridge and Iron Company, of Roanoke, which proposes to reinforce the eight spans of the bridge in immediate need of repair with suppleotate need of repair with supple-mentary steel trusses, at a total cost of $17,000. City Engineer Holling is inclined to favor the same plan, hold-ing the belief that it is poor economy to spend more than is absolutely necessary upon a bridge which will in the near future have to be replaced with an entirely new structure.

o'clock this afternoon. It is expected that the committee will take up for consideration the matter of overcharge on hack hire bills. The claim has been made that the funeral directors of the city are violating the law by charging more for carriage service than the maximum charge fixed by ordinance, and the matter may be made the subject of a general investigation.

City Auditorium To-Morrow Night.

With the travail of student days relegated to the past and minds intent upon the future which looms so large the Medical College of Virginia listened last night to the gospel of social service as preached to them by Rev. George W. McDaniel, D. D., in the First Baptist Church. It was such a baccalauof the fledgling doctors, dentists and the great opportunity that will be theirs when they go forth, without scrip or purse, to heal and cure.

The church was crowded to its capacity. Every sent was taken, and, though the atmosphere soon became almost stilling because of the crowd. almost stifling because of the crowd, few left before the services were finished. The graduating class, dressed in cap and gown, occupied the centre alsies, and special seats were reserved for the members of the faculty, who attended in a body. In the congregation were many who were mothers and fathers of the young men who are about to receive the diplomas distinctive of an ancient and honored profession, and they joined in the services with a spirit and earnestness that soon animated the whole body.

Dr. McDaniel's sermon was as simple as it was direct, indicative of a respect as it was direct, indicative of a respect as deep f r the medical profession in the large as for his own, and, without discursive wandering into the fields of philosophy or science, he pointed out to the young men that theirs was a duty which they could not avoid, a duty, not to their own personal benefit, but to all mankind.
